NO OBSTRUCTION ALONG THE BEACH

GOVERNOR CLEGHORN'S NEW PILARS ARE MAUKA' OF MANY OTHER WALLS AND PILARS.

"An article in The Star on 'Alleged Trespass on Public Rights at Waikiki Beach' evidently refers to some building going on at my place," said Governor Clegghorn, "and I wish to have it stated that the charge made, of obstructing the passage of the public along the beach, is absolutely untrue."

Governor Clegghorn asked that an inspection be made of his place, with a view to exposing the facts. He is well known as an enthusiast in beautifying beach and other property and objects to being described as one obstructing public rights.

An examination of the building going on at Governor Clegghorn's place shows that it does not blockade the passage of the public along the beach at all as compared with many places on both sides of his lot. Concrete foundations have been sunk for support for his building, but they are much behind most of the important seawalls and buildings along the beach. The hotels project much further than the pillars he has put up, and private places all the way to Diamond Head are farther out than his.

CANON AULT WILL SING

Rev. Canon Wm. Ault, who has so kindly consented to come over from Maui to assist Mrs. Ingalls at her recita. Shursday evening at Mrs. Frears, has a baritone of natural beauty and dramatic force. His greatest successes have been in oratorio, one of the most difficult roles in the curriculum of a singer. He will sing the Recit. "Thus Saith the Lord" with the beautiful aria "But Who May Abide" following. Canon Ault will also sing Van De Waters' "The Penitent." The canon is such a favorite wherever he is known that the mere announcement of his name on a program insures a large audience.

THE DAY'S FABLE.

One time, when there was a scarcity of food in the land, the Lion loaded the Camel with bags of eatables and conducted him to a place where the hungry and discontented had been commanded to meet. There was a large assemblage, and after a little address by the Lion the bags were opened. This was the signal for a row.

The wild Ass kicked because there was too little hay.

The Ox demanded to know if he was expected to change his nature and eat beans.

The Rhinoceros charged furiously against and said he'd be hanged if he'd come down to chewing wood-pile for a living.

The Tiger wanted blood instead of angels' food, and the Wolf said they couldn't put him off with canned French peas in place of real cutlets.

Every animal had something to say and some complaint to make, and the Camel brought up the rear by grunting out:

"What about me? Am I expected to eat smoked herring and make no kick?"

"Having pleased, satisfied and benefited you all," announced the Lion, as he raised his voice that all might hear, "I now declare this meeting adjourned!"

MORAL:

Just now there is a row over the tariff, but in time everybody will get what's coming to him—and more, too.

the fellow a chance to get on the water-wagon permanently. This is not the John Martin who represents the Anti-Saloon League and the names should not be confused. The John Martin who works for temperance was never known to take a drink of anything alcoholic.

CAT AND DOG FIGHT.

A Chinese charged a Japanese with trying to choke him. The Celestial lives in a house in the upper story of which lives the Nipponese. The latter has a dog and the Chinese has a cat. The dog chased the cat and the owner of the cat threatened to kill the dog, whereupon the owner of the dog put his hands on the pussy's master. "Solomon" Andrade dismissed the case.

LOOKING FOR ROBERTS.

There is a Portuguese who goes by the name of Roberts, that being a sort of Englishization of his proper name. The police are after him and he will be juggled today. He is a nuisance of the worst sort and stops ladies on the street with insulting language. He has lately been bothering an aged Portuguese family on Emma street. He is generally drunk and never any good.

A model of the sugar refinery at Crockett, Cal., has been received by the Hawaii Promotion Committee and will be placed on exhibition.
